	All items on the cards were filled in by handwriting experts who were selected from various government agencies and were specially trained for the purpose. The registration number on the citizenship card was assigned in accordance with the area in which an individual lived, and with his position in his family. For example, in Susong-ni the 25 pan were numbered from 200 to 225. A number was also assigned to each family in the pan and to each member of the family. Thus, the registration number for the senior male member of the first family of the 18th pan was 10 Additional entries on the citizenship card included a serial number, the address of the individual and the date he began living there, his profession and the position, and when applicable, his status as a dependent, such as "dependent of an office worker."									ţ
